Main themes from Lecture Notes:

- Differences between Groups and Teams
- How Teams differentiate: (a) Skills, (b) Authority – Decision Making, (c) Temporal Stability – Worked together previously, and likely they can maintain the dynamic.
- 5 stages of team development:
Forming, Storming, Norming, Performing, Adjourning
- Challenge 1: Groupthink (Conformity) ----- Solution: Voice Opinions
- Challenge 2: Social Loafing (Being Lazy) ----- Solution: Clear goals and responsibilities

Study Smart vs Study Hard

Think Out of the Box

Additional Point(s)

How to identify potential causes of conflict

(a) Competition over scarce resources (Rivalry), (b) Communication breakdown, (c) Goal differences, (d) Lack of trust, (e) Lack of non-verbal cues in virtual interactions (misunderstanding)

Stages of Team Development

Performing

The team works in an open and trusting atmosphere where flexibility is the key and hierarchy is of little importance.

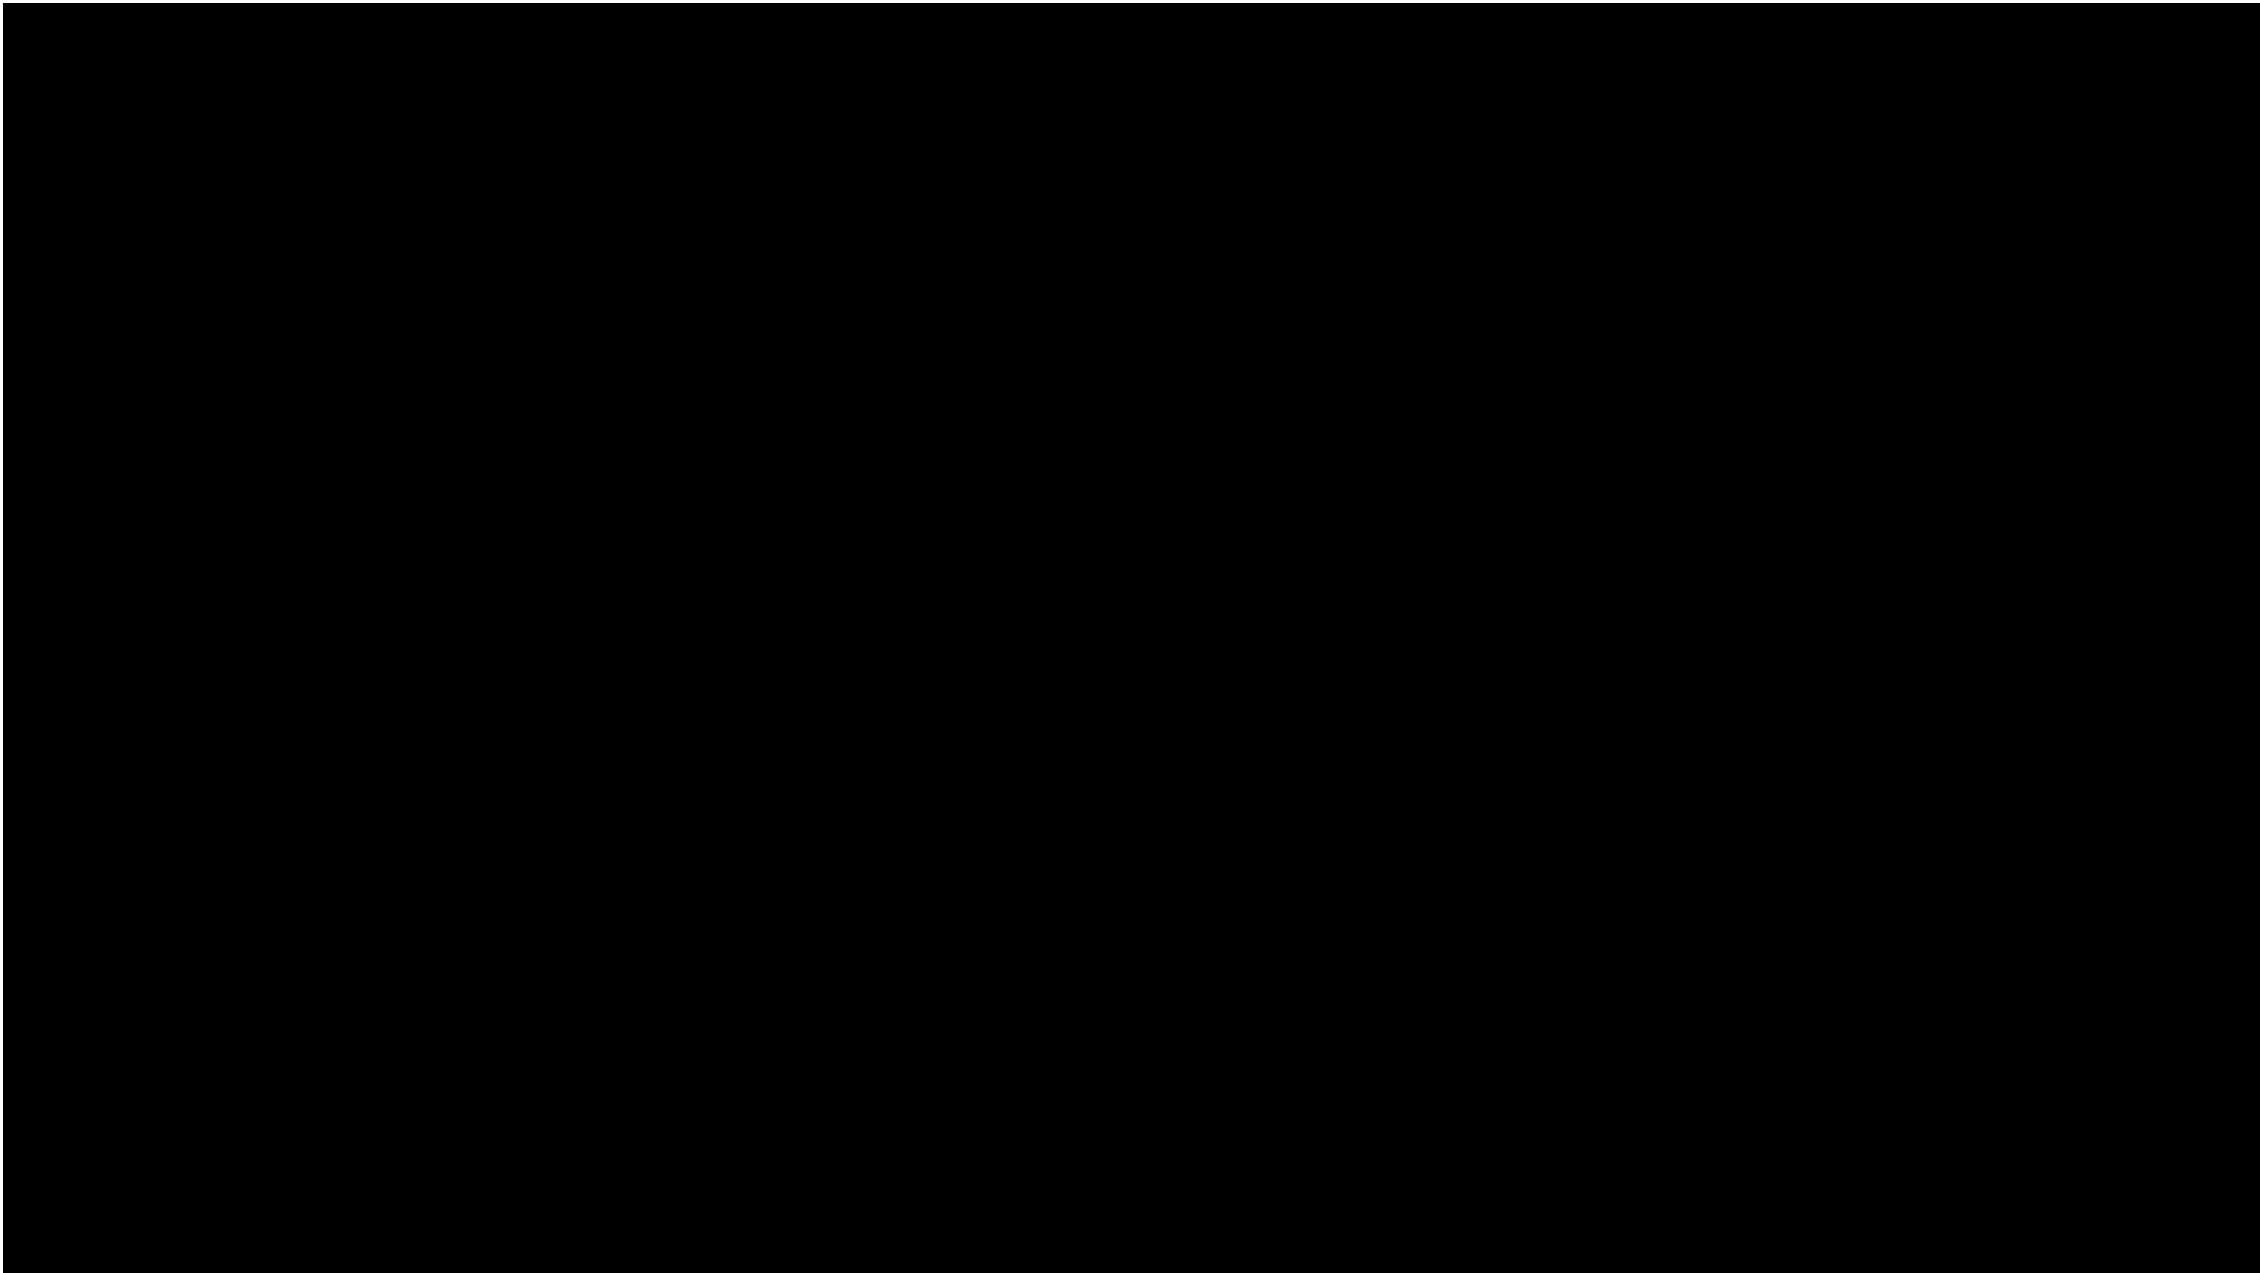

Adjourning

The team conducts an assessment of the year and implements a plan for transitioning roles and recognizing members' contributions.

Lecture 6: Managing Knowledge and Learning

Key Discussion Points

Main themes from Lecture Notes:

TYPES OF KNOWLEDGE

- Explicit knowledge (What) – spoken, reflect upon, and recorded. E.g. Different parts of a bicycle, and its function
- Tacit knowledge (How) – things we actually use when we do it, but cannot necessarily articulate it
- Discuss in your small groups, Give me 10 examples!

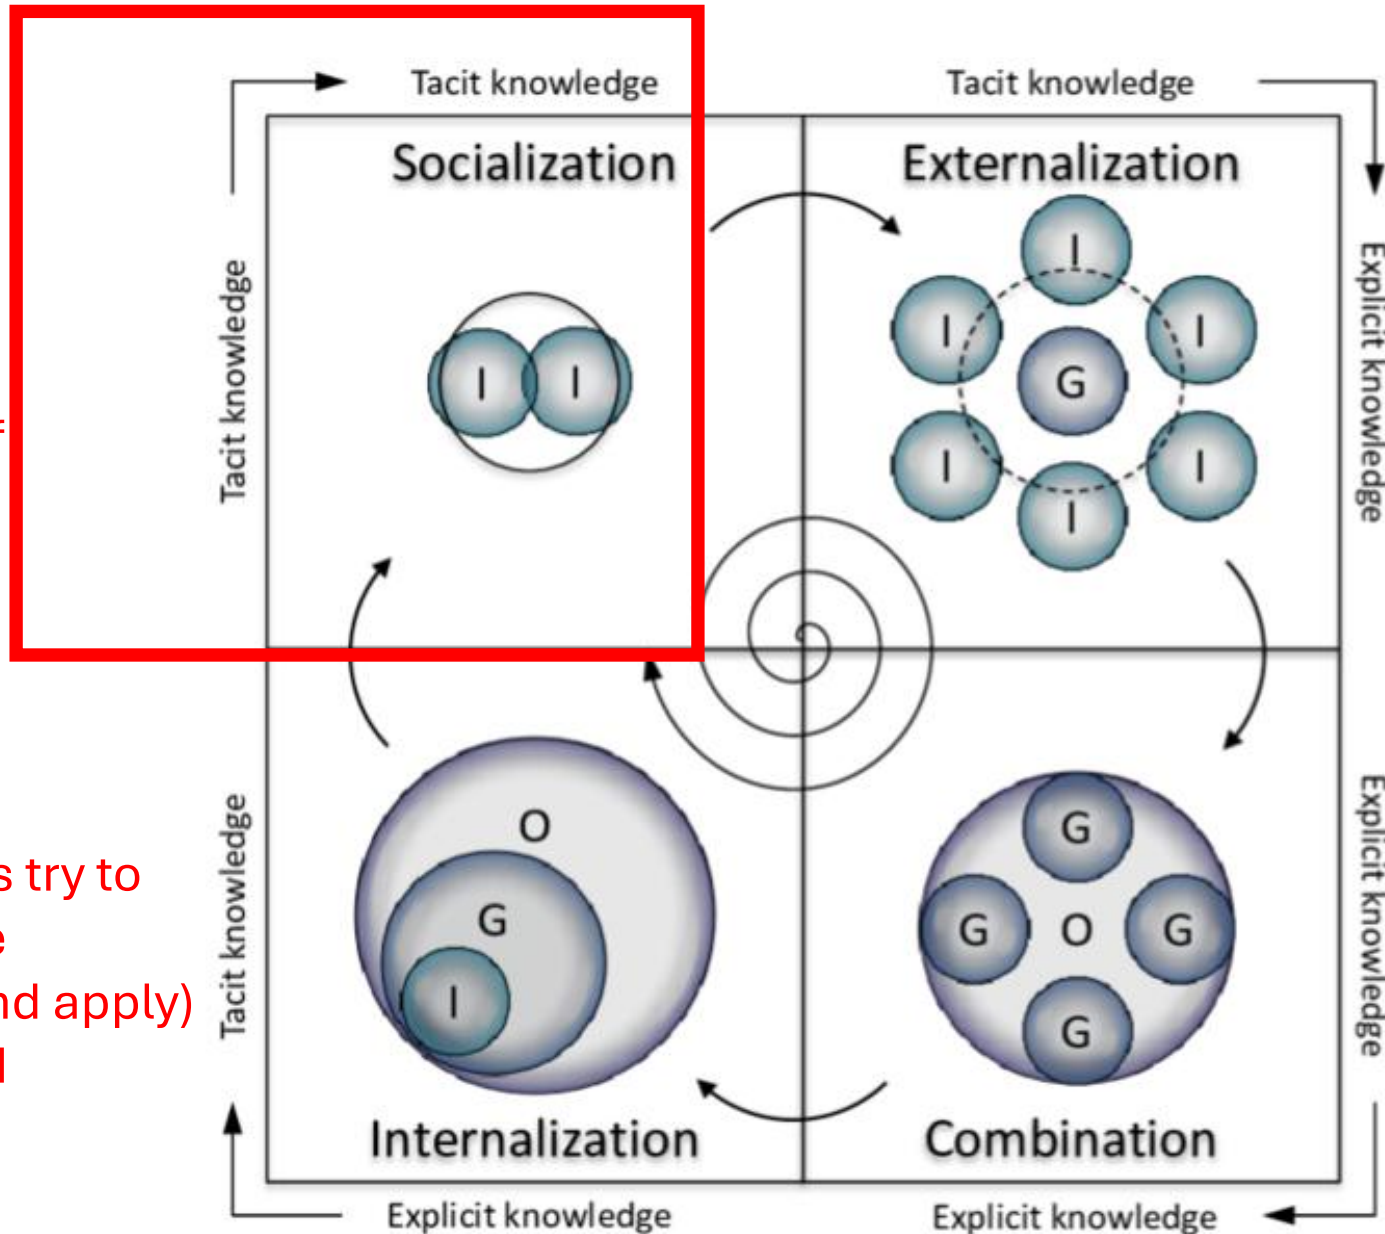

SOURCES OF KNOWLEDGE

- Learning by doing – Get your hands dirty!
- Hearing stories – Shared narratives of how things happened, and problems solved – Yacht Show and follow up?
- Popular accounts – Celebrated accounts of CEO usually shared through media – Beware: don't read too much
- Being curious – Good “theory” aka Assumptions (Hypotheses), then Research on it = Trial and errors
- Professional Development – formal learning and courses in various institutions (HERE)
- Community of Practice – Facilitating social learning by sharing of knowledge

FORMS OF KNOWLEDGE CREATION (Example 1: Sales, Example 2: Bake, Example 3: Injection)

- Socialisation = T2T - Tacit to Tacit knowledge – e.g., Conversation between 2 individual salespersons' how to sell.
- Externalisation = T2E – Tacit to Explicit knowledge – e.g., All Individuals (Same group) trying to record the content
- Combination = E2E – Explicit to Explicit knowledge – e.g. Group A to Group B, sharing with another sales teams
- Internalisation = E2T – Explicit to Tacit knowledge – e.g. Put into action, Step 1, 2, 3, and improve on own pace

Lecture 7: Managing Innovation and Change

Key Discussion Points

Main themes from Lecture Notes:

Define Innovation

The implementation of a new or significantly improved product or service or new organizational process or practice

Innovation is both a process and an outcome.

The Innovation Journey

- ONE, the initiation stage
- TWO, the development stage
- THREE, the implementation stage

Consider the following stages:

ONE, the initiation stage

- (1.1) develop the business case → consider the business environment (SWOT to TOWS), for the project's profitability.
- (1.2) run feasibility test → look into the viability of the product from the resources view (physical, IP, HR and Finance)
- (1.3) enlist stakeholders → get the relevant people or partners, to form the “right” team to create or secure the resources

TWO, the development stage

- (2.1) form product prototype → create the Minimum Viable Product (MVP) to meet the NEED first.
- (2.2) confirm method of production → explore the various ways to produce in the most efficient way (setting up plants)
- (2.3) source the supply → secure the supply line in a larger scale, negotiation, procurement and logistics needs

THREE, the implementation stage

- (3.1) launch and test potential innovation → Put the MVP into the market, and get ready to pivot
- (3.2) build support (buy-in) for the innovation → there is a need to gain support from various stakeholders, e.g., Govt
- (3.3) monitor the feedback, learn, and unlearn → there is a need to evaluate and measure the effectiveness

Lecture 8: Managing Globalisation

Key Discussion Points

INTERNATIONALISATION STRATEGY

- Globalise = Standardisation 80% + Adaptation 20%
- Localise = Standardisation 20% + Adaptation 80%
- Glocalise = Standardisation 50% + Adaptation 50%

Global Business
International Business
Best of both Worlds.

	Standardization	Adaptation
Pros	• Economies of scale • Faster set up time • Single Coherent global image • Excellent monitoring of communication	• Respect local specifications and expectations • Excellent local image • Customers keep their landmark and feel noticed
Cons	• Possible loss of advertising effectiveness • Little reactivity and little flexibility • Can create negative reaction from neglecting local needs	• Higher cost • Time consuming and poor speed of execution • Difficulty to know what consumers really want

Example(s)

❑ Globalise = Apple

❑ Localise = McDonalds

❑ Glocalise = Toyota

MARKET ENTRY STRATEGIES

Reflection of Learning Project Management

Project managers work with teams and in defining projects need to be clear about project objectives. Project managers may reflect on how they have performed in a project order to develop their project management practice. Reflection may be defined as The model of reflection adopted in this reflection is The parts of the model

Background or context for the essay

Defining any key concepts for the essay, i.e. reflection

Any key theories, frameworks or models to be used, i.e. the model you are using

Preview of the main parts of the essay, i.e. the main parts of the model

EXAMPLE

(1) Description (Describe)

The guest lecturer in Project Management Techniques, Dr Strangelove, started her presentation by asking us to assemble as a group of five and then build a tower from straws. She said it would be judged in terms of strength, height, and how aesthetically pleasing it was. My group and I did the task cooperatively and we finished it in the prescribed time. We thought we had done very well. Then Dr Strangelove made her point: all groups built the tower without much attention to project management techniques in terms of asking clients for clarification for planning, resources allocation, etc. None of us had asked a single question about the purpose, constraints, resources or stakeholder needs. The lecturer's feedback was that the group had displayed what she describes as 'groupthink'.

Describe in detail the situation that led to the insight

EXAMPLE

(2) Feelings (Aware)

As much as I agree, with the lecturer's feedback on the 'groupthink' mental. I felt that there are something deeper in my heart that dictate that behaviour. It is difficult for me to share my opinions at times. Some members in the group were rather aggressive in pushing through their thoughts. If I chose to go against their wishes, the dynamic will change, and the vibes in the group will move towards the negative side. I do not want voice out, as I am worried that it will affect our friendship. I felt helpless sometimes.

Aware

Feel the vibes, and the changes in the emotions in various situation.

No need to use any citations.

100% originality.

EXAMPLE

(3) Evaluation (Evaluate)

A major benefit of understanding the critical role of questioning in project management is that it might give me more confidence about asking questions. It changes my view of questioning when working in group projects. I traditionally would not feel able to question the team leaders in these projects. I would try to establish the requirements and resources in some other way. I thought I could avoid asking questions by transferring lessons learned from one situation to another. But now I feel that I am developing the skills and confidence to determine the dimensions and resources of a project. I could ask questions that generate information by using a Crawford and Pollack (2004) approach. Knowing the role of questioning to achieve objective clarity for a specific purpose is very valuable for me to give me confidence when leading a project at university and when I am asked to lead small projects in my part-time work.

Evaluate:

What relevance does it have?

How does it benefit your:

- learning?
- coursework?
- future professional development?

theory or literature

EXAMPLE

4. Analysis (Interpret)

Dr Strangelove's comment made me want to read about 'groupthink' (Riccobono, Bruccoleri & Größler, 2016). I realised that this phenomenon can occur in project teams, and is something to watch out for as it gets in the way of clarification of purpose (Strangelove, 2016). Understanding the importance of clarification is central to my understanding of project management. It underpins my use of project management tools and techniques. Asking clarifying questions about types of work resources (people and equipment) and material resources (supplies, stock, and other consumable resources) will allow me to identify what resources are needed for project effectiveness. When we want to designate who or what is accountable for accomplishing tasks in our project schedule for the group assessment in this class, I can use these tools discussed in the lecture (Strangelove, 2016) to assign tasks and responsibilities ... All this is possible only if requirements are clarified through questions (Strangelove, 2016) .

Interpret what the insight means e.g.,

- explain why the insight is significant (in general, but particularly to you)
- discuss the questions it raises (in general or for you)
- make connections between the insight and the course, theory or literature

Example

(5) Conclusion (Sum Up)

In this essay, I have reflected on ...

← Topic sentence

← Sum up the main points of the essay

← Make a final concluding statement

Note: Don't introduce any new ideas or evidence

EXAMPLE

(6) Action (Plan)

I believe this new realisation will be useful throughout my degree and in particular for future group projects as well and in current part-time job and private life. In my degree studies, I will endeavour to clarify the critical aspects of project planning by using a questioning technique that allows for understanding objective dimensions, and also any subjective aspects. In my part-time job I will use questioning to clarify the goals and objectives of the projects assigned to me by my manager and other who are impacted by the project that I am working on. In my life I will question my own assumptions about what is expected of me before I jump in (and build any more towers).

Plan how you may use the new insight in:

- your current course, placement or project
- other courses in your degree
- your future work or practice
- your private or professional life in general
